P R E F A C E.

THE following Vocabulary of the Manks language has been compiled with considerable labour and assiduity. It is designed to facilitate the attainment of that ancient language, and to furnish the reader not only with a variety of vocables, idiomatic phrases, and proverbial expressions, but also the outlines of a Manks Grammar.

That a language so venerable for its antiquity and so estimable on many accounts should be so generally neglected, is much to be lamented. The consequence of this neglect has been, that numerous corruptions have crept into the dialect in general use, and so many anglicisms been adopted, that the Manks is now seldom spoken or written in its original purity. Despised and neglected, however, as the language appears to be at present, it is susceptible of high improvement, and justly entitled to the attention of the scholar. The sublime strains of OSSIAN mark the capabilities of the language, and commend it to the regard of the philologist as a subject of curious enquiry, and deserving accurate investigation.

At the present period, when this interesting little Island promises to become once more the abode of science and literature, it is hoped that Gaelic learning will revive, and that every facility will be afforded for the acquisition of a language so essentially necessary within the precincts of Mona to the students of Divinity, and the students of Law. To both these classes, it is presumed, the compilation now offered to the public will prove an important acquisition. Such a publication has long been a desideratum in Manks literature, and possesses fair claims to general acceptance. Whilst the natives of Wales and the natives of North Britain are enthusiastically attached to the language of their forefathers, let it not be said that the natives of Mona regard "Chengey ny mayrey Vannin veg veen" with disgraceful apathy and heartless indifference. As long as the Manks Bible and the Manks Liturgy remain they will testify that our ancestors thought and felt more correctly.

Amongst the numerous literary advantages which "King William's College" is expected to afford the sons of Mona, it is devoutly to be wished that the cultivation of the vernacular tongue be not overlooked. The establishment of a professorship for that specific object would be highly desirable,—such an arrangement would be in perfect unison with the pious and benevolent design of the Founder of the Academic Fund, whose primary object appears to have been to prepare candidates for the Holy Ministry in the Isle of Man, and thus promote the highest and best interests of the country.

If the following work should contribute in the smallest degree to advance so important an end, the Compiler will have reason to regard his labour as well bestowed.

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

MANKS LANGUAGE.

I AM well aware that the utility of the following work will be variously appreciated by my brother Manksmen. Some will be disposed to deride the endeavour to restore vigour to a decaying language. Those who reckon the extirpation of the Manks a necessary step towards that general extension of the English, which they deem essential to the interest of the Isle of Man, will condemn every effort which seems likely to retard its extinction.

But those will think otherwise who consider that there are thousands of the natives of the Island that can at present receive no useful knowledge whatever, except through the medium of the Manks language; they will judge from experience, as well as from the nature of the case, that no work of this description will hinder the progress of the English, but in fact have the contrary effect.

It is obvious, that when tribes of men are intermixed who speak different languages, a great part of the knowledge which man should afford his neighbour must be diminished. The Magistrate cannot address his suitors,—the Pastor his flock, but through the imperfect medium of an interpreter. Lawyers, Divines, Physicians, Merchants, Manufacturers, and Farmers, all feel more or less this inconvenience when they transact business with whom they have no language in common.

To remedy such defect, the following Manks Dictionary, with the corresponding words in English, may, it is hoped by the Compiler, contribute in some degree to facilitate the acquisition of both the Manks and English languages; and, if received with indulgence, may be followed by its counterpart, "ENGLISH RENDERED INTO MANKS."

To place the present publication within the reach of the peasantry of the Isle of Man, it has been greatly abridged from what was at first purposed by the author; notwithstanding which, it is hoped will give general satisfaction, and be a standing memorial of that very ancient language—the Manks or Gaelic, to generations yet unborn; as it may with a degree of truth be asserted that we have little more than two-thirds of the language preserved in the published translation of the Scriptures and the Church Liturgy.

The following Remarks of Reference, with the work itself, will enable the reader to form some idea of the construction of the language.

REMARKS,

TO WHICH ARE ANNEXED FIGURES OF REFERENCE.

Of the LETTERS and their SOUNDS.

1. THE Alphabet consists of seventeen single and three double consonants, and seven vowels—a, e, i, o, u, w, y. Of the consonants, fifteen are mutable—b, c, ch, d, f, g, j, k, m, p, q, s, sh, sl, t. The immutables are—l, n, r, which always retain their sound; and alter not, except when preceded by s in the beginning of a word to show the degrees of comparison. Gh and ph begin no radical, or at least ought to begin none, as the language now stands; although there are words that are so written: these are shown where they occur in the work, and will be seen only to be aspirations, gh of g and of d, and ph of p. Sh and sl must be considered double consonants as they have a change peculiar to themselves, and differ from the other radical initialled s's. The v is considered a secondary mute.

2. A is reckoned a broad vowel, and in some words sounded as o, as in CLAGH (a stone), clogh; and as u, as in GOAN (scarce), goun. It is pronounced as a in the English words of man, pan; as, BAD, LAD, BAB, &c.; and when circumflexed, as in mároo, sárey, is sounded as in matron, &c.

3. B is a labial, or lip-letter, and pronounced as b, in English; as, BARB, BOAYL.

4. C preserves a strong sound in its unaspirated state, as the English k, or as c in can; as, CAM, CAPPAN. It never, however, usurps the pronunciation of s, as in the English words eis-tern, city, cedar, &c.

5. CH has a soft sound, as in CHAGTER, CHARBA, CBINGYS; like ch in English, in cherry, charcoal, chime, &c.

6. CH has a hard or harsh sound, which sound is not in the English language. I cannot express it better than by a word which I would write or spell egh or egg-yth, and a, CHA (not); and which sound would go through with the vowels, thus: egh e, CHE; egh i, CHI; egh o, CUO; egh u, CHU; egh y, CHY; and with CBLA, CHLE, &c.; and CHRA, CHRE, &c., &c.

7. D is pronounced as d, in English, in drone, dunnal, &c.

8. But D, in other words, as if written and pronounced dh, as in DAA, DOO, &c.

9. E is reckoned a small vowel, but is sometimes sounded long, and sometimes short; the latter sound as heard in men, ten, bed (in English) answers to the Manks BEN, REN, SHEN, &c.

10. The long or circumflexed E, as in mériu, t'ch, té, vé, &c., like the English they, bey; or as a in way, hay, say, &c.

11. F is called a weak consonant; because, when aspirated, it looses all its force; as, FEA (rest); E EA (his rest.) It corresponds in many cases with v; and has the English sound in FA, FAASE, FOAYS, &c.

12. G is a heavy consonant, and pronounced as g, in English, in gain, get, go; as, GAMMAN, GOAILL, GARRISH; but has no soft sound as in the words gentle, generous, &c.

13. When G is aspirated to gh, it is reckoned a light consonant, and has a guttural sound; no such sound is in the English language; and although gh is in ghost and ghastly, they are only sounded gost, gusstly.

14. H is pronounced as h in the words hand, hind, hold, &c. in English. Some would rather call h an auxiliary than a letter, because it rarely begins any radical word except a few small ones, as, HANNAH, HYN, &c., and serves only to aspirate the other consonants, as, ch, gh, mh, ph, th, &c.; or the vowels, as, ha, he, hi, &c. When it aspirates from t, followed by an r, it is often sounded as ch, as E HRRAA (his time); E HROO (his envy); &c. It is an initial in feminine genitive nouns; as, E HEDDIN (her face); E HAIGNEY (her mind or will); E HENNYM (her name.) The masculine of those would be E EDDIN (his face); E AIGNEY (his mind); E ENNYM (his name.)

15. I is one of the small vowels, and pronounced as i (in English) in pin, win, sin; as, SHIMMEY, SHID, SHILLEY.

16. J is pronounced exactly like the soft English g, and is perfectly uniform in its sound.

17. K. This letter has precisely the sound of hard c, in English, and is never silent as the English k in knee, knave, know, &c.

18. L. Some say this letter admits of no aspiration, and is pronounced as l (in English) in law, lie, lone; as, LAUE, LIOAR, LANE; but I think there is a distinction between lie or ly in English, and LHE in Manks; and had the words LOO, LOOR, &c., been spelled or written LHOO and LHOOR, they would have answered the Manks pronunciation better, for without the h the sound is too narrow, except to those who know that they require that sound.

19. M is a strong consonant, but it is often changed into v; and when it is followed by w, oo, or u, it changes to v or w, when aspirated.

20. N is sounded as n in English; it is never aspirated nor eclipsed, but yet called a light consonant, and is often doubled to give the greater sound.

21. O is a broad vowel; when acuted as o in gone, in English, answers the Manks SON, CRON, &c.

22. When O is circumflexed as in bone, shone, open, &c., thus ONEY, ONYR, &c. Manks.

23. O before l in the Manks, sounds OHL.

24. P. This is a hard consonant, and pronounced as p in English.

25. PH is sounded as the English f.

26. Q, which is always followed by u, has the sound of kw.

27. R is a light consonant, and pronounced as r in English; but some times when an initial, it requires to be sounded as if written rh; as, RED (a thing), AHED.

28. S, although called the queen of consonants, is subject to many changes, as shown in Remarks 55, 56, 57, 58, 111, 112, 161, &c. It sounds as (in English) savor, sense—SAGGYRT—SOLLAN.

29. T. This is a hard consonant, naturally commuted with d; as, DY GERRID, for DY GERRIT.

30. When T is an initial before a vowel, it requires to be sounded as if written th.

31. U is one of the three broad vowels with a and o, and sounded as u (in English) in cumber; as, CUM (hold).

32. V is not properly a radical initial consonant; but only a secondary mute. However, we have some few words which begin with v as a radical; as, VAIDJYN, VEIH, &c.

33. W. Though I have set down this letter as a vowel, I know of no syllable or word without another vowel attached to it, with consonants, to make a word or syllable. The Welsh have it a vowel, without any support. Its sound is as oo (in English) in boot, soot, root; as, WARDOON, WARP, WARREE.

34. Y. This letter as a vowel and a consonant is too frequently used in the Manks. Its first or primary sound would be as i (in English) in bind, bile, &c.

35. But Y has another sound as u, and is as i (in English) in bird, third,—answering to the sound in SPYRRYD, YMYRCHAGH, YNICAN, &c. in Manks.

36. This letter has the sound of e in the word the (in English); as, DV, DTY, MY, SY, &c.

37. Y some times has the sound of ee, as in the English, barley, belly, stingy, &c.; as, LHEIY, GUIY, SEIY, &c.

38. Such words as begin with mutable or changeable consonants, viz.: b, c, ch, d, f, g, j, k, m, p, q, s, sh, sl, and l, change these their radical initial letters as occasion require, and according to the effect the preceding words have on them.

39. The letter A, as an initial in radical verbs, changes to d, or rather has d placed before it, as shown in Remark 60; and to g, (or has g placed before it) as shown in Remark 61; and also changes to n, (or has n placed before it) to show the preterit or past time of the action of the verb: and so of all the vowels when radical initials.—See Remark 119, &c.

40. But the letter A and all the vowels change to h (or have h placed before them) to show the genitive or ownership case of the feminine gender, as may be seen under the H in the work, and in Remark 14.

41. Words, primarily beginning with B, have three initials, viz.: b, v, m; as, BRAAR (a brother); E YRAAR (his brother); NYN MRAAR (your, &c. brother); &c. &c.

42. But when the second letter after the B is w, oo, or u, such words change to w or v as an initial; as, BOOIAGH (willing or pleased); FEER WOOIAGH (very willing or pleased, &c.); and BWOAILLEE (a fold); E WOAILLEE (his fold); BUIGHEY (jaundice); YN WUIGHEY or VUIGHEY (the jaundice or yellows).

43. Words beginning with C have three initials, viz.: c, ch, and g; as, CARREY (a friend); E CHARREY (his friend); NYN GARREY (your, &c. friend).

44. Words beginning with CH have also three initials, viz.: ch, h, and j; as, CHENGEY (a tongue); E HENGEY (his tongue); NYN JENGEY (your, &c. tongue), &c.

45. Words initialled by D have two, viz.: d and gh; as, DOOINNEY (a man); E GHOINNEY (his man), &c.

46. Words radically initialled by E, have four, and so have all the other vowels the initial vowel, and three others, viz.: e, or the other vowel, and d, g, and n; as, ECK (pay); DEECK (paid or did pay); GEECK (paying). See Remarks 60 and 61; and ER NEECK (hath or having, &c. paid). See also a change mentioned in Remark 40.

47. Some words commencing with E, radically, for better sound's sake begin with y; as, E EAST (a fish), YEEAST; E AN (a chicken), YEEAN, &c.

48. Words beginning with F have nine or more changes, viz.: d and v, and the first vowel or consonant after the f, if the preceding word change it.

49. Words radically initialled by G have two, as g and gh; as, GEAY (wind); YN GHEAY (the wind). G also sometimes changes to y; as, GIARE (short); RO YIARE (too short), though sometimes spelled GHIARE; GIALI (white or bright); RO YIALI (too bright). This and others are also written RO GHIALI, &c.

50. Words commencing with J have two initials, j and y; as, JEE (God); E YEE, (his God); &c.

51. Words initialled with K have three, viz.: k, ch, and g; as, KEYREY (a sheep); E CHEYREY (his sheep); NYN GEYREY (your &c. sheep), &c.

52. M, beginning words has but two initials, viz.: m and v; as, MOYRN (pride); E VOYRN (his pride), &c.

53. P, beginning words has three initials, viz.: p, ph, and b; as, POGAR (power); E PHOGAR (his power); NYN BOGAR (your &c. power), &c.

54. Q, beginning radicals, has three initials, viz.: q, wh, and g; as, QUAYVL (a court); E WHUAYVL (his court); NYN GUAYVL (your, &c. court), &c.

55. S, beginning words radically, has many changes, viz.: s, h, t; as, SODILL (an eye); E HOOILL (his eye); YN TOOILL (the eye).

56. And if S be followed by h, it changes to ch and h; as, SHENN GHOINNEY (an old man); YN CHENN GHOINNEY (the old man); E HENN GHOINNEY (his old man).

57. When S is followed by l, it changes to cl and l; as, SLAT (a rod); YN CLAT (the rod); E LAT (his rod, &c.)

58. The letter S, apostrophized before adjectives and participles, I think is an abbreviation of smoo, by which the degrees of comparison are shown throughout the language; first, the positive, FIRRINAGH (true); secondly, a degree above the positive; as, S'FIRRINAGH (how true); thirdly, the comparative, NY S'FIRRINEE (more true); fourthly, the superlative, YN RAA S'FIRRINEE (the truest saying).

59. T, beginning words radically, has three initials, viz.: t, h, and d; as, TOWSE (a measure); E HOWSE (his measure); NYN DOWSE (your, &c. measure).

Of VERBS.

60. Verbs commencing radically with vowels, begin with d to show the preterit or past time of action, or negatively; as, AARL OF AARLEE (cook, dress, or prepare); DAARLEE (did cook, dress, or prepare); and negatively, CHA DAARLEE, &c.; and EOYLLÉE (dung or manure); DEOYLLÉE (did dung, or manure); and CHA DEOYLLÉE, &c.

61. Verbs beginning in like manner with vowels, to show the present and also the past time of action, begin with g; as, AASE (grow); GAASE (growing); YA MEE GAASE (I was growing); IRREE (rise); &c.

62. Of verbs irregular, which do not altogether change according to the foregoing remarks.—CHEET (coming), changes to BAINK, DAINE, HIG, JIG, HARR, DARR, HEET, JEET, TAR.

CLASHYVN (hearing), CLASHT, CHLASHTYVN, CHEAYLL, CLUYN, CHLUYN, GEAYLL, CLUYN.

CUR, or COVRT (giving, putting, sending, &c.), CHOVRT, HUG, DUG, VER and VERR, DER and DERR.

FAKIN (seeing), AKIN, FAIK, HEE, HONNICE, VAIK, VARIN, N'AIKIN.

GEDDYN (getting), GHEDDYN POW, HOOAR, DOOAR, YIO, YIOGH, YIOW, NOW, VOW, VOCH.

GOAILL (taking), GHOAYLL, GO, GHO, COW, GHOW, N'GHOAILL.

GOLL (going), HIE, HEM, HEU, HOOIN, COW, RACH, JAGH, JED, JEM, JE'OO, N'GHOLL, GHOLL.

GRA (saying), ABHYR, DOOVRT, GRRA, JIR' and JIRR, YIAR and YIARR, N'ABHYR, N'YIARR.

JANNOO (doing), JEAN, JIN and JINN, YINN, N'YANNOO.

63. The regular verbs change their initials according to what has been said on the changing of the letters and their terminations, as specified in Remarks 77—88.

Of PLURALS.

64. Of the forming of plurals in the Manks, the addition of YN to the singular is the most common, which is shown after the singulars through the work. Have the plurals housen, (which was formerly used as the plural in the English for houses), oxen, men, women, children, &c., any analogy to this? Undoubtedly they have.

65. Other words are formed into plurals by the addition of AGHYN to the singulars; these, for the most part, are given in the work after their singulars.

66. There are other words that only require GHYN to be added to the singular.

67. Some singular words, ending in EY, change the EY to AGHYN, to pluralize them; as, CAGGEY (war); CAGGAGHYN (wars); COONEY (help); COONAGHYN (helps), &c.

68. Other words ending in EY, change the Y to EYN; as, BUNNEY (sheaf); BUNNEEYN (sheaves) &c.

69. Other singulars ending in E and EY, change the E and EY to YN; as, PAITHEY (a child); PAITCHYN (children); FOCKLE (a word); FOCKLYN (words).

70. Some few singulars ending in LEY, change the LEY to JYN; as, BILLEY (a tree); HILJYN (trees); BALLEY (a town or estate); BALJYN (towns or estates), &c.

71. The termination of singulars in AGH, for the most part to pluralize them, changes the AGH to EE; as, GIMMAGH (a lobster); GIMMEE (lobsters), &c.

72. The ending of singulars in AGH, AGHT, IN, or YN, sometimes changes to EEVN; as, EADDAGH (woollen cloth); EADDEEYVN (woollen cloths); CLADDAGH, singular; CLADDEEYVN, plural; CURNAGHT (wheat); CURNEEYVN (wheats); SKILLIN (a shilling); SKILLEEYVN (shillings).

73. There are other formations of plurals in the middle of words; as, MAC (a son); MEC (sons).

74. Others by changing OA or O, to UI; as, DOARN (a fist); DUIRN (fists); STOVL (a stool); STUILL (stools).

75. The changing of E to I makes plural in some words; as, FER to FIR, &c.

76. There are other words that require the change of y to i; as, CABBYL (a horse); CABBIL (horses), &c.

Of the TERMINATION of VERBS.

77. Of the termination of verbs, or the compounding of auxiliary verbs, pronouns, &c., to the verbs.—AGH, added to a verb, is used with all the nominative pronouns, except I; as, he, EH; they, AD; we, SHIN; she, EE; you, SHIU; thou, OO, &c., as the words may require; and means would or wouldst, could or couldst, might or mightest, &c., do the action of the verb; or would or wouldst, &c., not do the action of the verb; as the verb BERR (overtake); BERRAGH EH (he would, &c., overtake); or, CHA BERRAGH OO (thou wouldst not overtake); &c., &c.

78. AIL, joined to a verb, signifies ing in English; as, BAAR (spend); BAARAIL (spending); FAAG (leave); FAAGAIL (leaving); &c.

79. AL, added to a verb, has the same meaning as AIL, ing, in English, and may be termed the grand Manksifier-general of English verbs; as, trying, TRYAL; fixing, FIXAL, &c., &c; but not to the credit or honour of those who so make use of it.

80. EE. This added to a verb, and used with the nominative pronouns (except I or she) means will or will, shall or shall, perform the action of the verb to which it is annexed; or will or shall not perform the action of the verb, as set forth in remark 77, or AOH; that is, would; and this is, will and shall do.

81. EIL. This, as well as AIL and AL, when added to a verb, means ing; as, DOOYTEIL (doubting); TREIShteil (trusting).

82. EY. This syllable, also added to a verb, corresponds to the English ing, or the doing or performing the action of the verb to which it is annexed; as, GOBBRAGHEY (working); FLUIGHEY (wetting), &c.

83. IN. This termination, which always requires to be sounded as if written ihn, partakes of the nature of the auxiliary verb would and the pronoun I; as, BERR (overtake); BERRIN (I would overtake), and when so joined together is called pronominal.

84. INS. This termination to a verb is the emphatic, absolute, certain, especial or particular of the preceding IN, is that case to the verb to which annexed, and always requires to be sounded as if written ihns; as, BERR (overtake); BERRINS (I would, emphatically, absolutely, or certainly, &c. overtake).

85. IT or T. These terminations, which answer to the English ed, must, to retain the proper Manks sound, be pronounced as if written ihT, and hT, and partake of the nature of an adjective. Added to a verb it becomes a participle. There are many words of this part of speech in English that do not admit of ending in ed; as, grown, found, lost, worn, &c.; yet these all end in it or t in the Manks; as, AASIT, FEDDYNIT, CAILT or CAILLIT, CEAUT, &c.

86. YM. This syllable, which partakes of the nature of the pronoun I and the auxiliary verb will, added to a verb, signifies that I will do or suffer the action of the verb to which applied; as, BERR (overtake); BERRYM (I will overtake), &c.

87. YMS, it may be said, is the same to YM, as INS is to IN, the absolute, certain, especial or emphatic of YM; as, BERR (overtake); BERRYMS (I will emphatically overtake.)

88. YS. This termination, and EE, added to verbs, is nearly of the same import; but it is my opinion that the ys means shall or shall do the action of the verb; and EE, will and will; but the translators of the Scriptures into our language use it for both. This syllable, added to a verb, should always be employed where two or more words that are sounded alike happen together; as, EE EE EE (she will eat). When these occur, we generally say EE YS EE (she shall or will eat). This postfix is undoubtedly used in the subjunctive mood for eat, eats, eateth, eatest, &c; as, MY EEYS, EH, AD, OO, &c. (if he eats, if they eat, if thou eateth); MY EEYS DOONNEY (if a man eat, shall eat, or eateth); and so of other verbs. In Genesis ii. 17, we have SON ER Y LAA EEYS OO JEH (for in the day thou eateth thereof); and in the xiv. chap. 15, it is, QUOI ERBEE VARRYNS CAIN (whosoever slayeth Cain). This termination is also used in apposition; as, SHOH YN DOONNEY OBBYRYS DIU (this is the man that will or shall work for you).

OF ADJECTIVAL NOUNS.

89. Of the forming of adjectival nouns, or substantives made of adjectives, in the Manks, by the addition or changing of a syllable in the termination of a word, corresponding to the English ness, ty, &c.—The most common of these are id and D, which require to retain the Manks sound, and pronounced as if written ihD, and hD. These syllables are sometimes added to the adjective; as, BIOYR (brisk); BIOYRID (briskness); BOUYR (deaf); BOUYRID (deafness); MOOAR (big or great); MOOAD (greatness), &c.

90. Some adjectival nouns are made by a part of the adjective being changed; as, JOOIGH (greedy); JOOID (greediness); BERCHAGH (rich); BERCHID (richness), &c.

91. Other adjectives are changed for the most part; as, GIALL (bright or white); GILLID (brightness); MARROO (dead); MERRUID (deadness), &c.

92. Some other adjectives require JID in place of the latter syllable; as, MILLISH (sweet); MILJID (sweetness); VRJID (height or highness), &c.

93. YS and S are sometimes added to the adjective, and at other times placed instead of the last syllable or part; as, DORRAGHEY (dark); DORRAGHYS (darkness); though the change to 1D, in Remark 89, is sometimes used; as, DORRID (darkness); and YNRICK (upright, or sincere); YNRICKYS (uprightness), &c.

94. For sake of abridging the work, the reader is desired, in reference to derivative verbs and their conjunction into pronominals, with the auxiliary verbs shall, will, would, &c., to look to the radical verb, as the letter placed at the end of the explanation shows the initial from which the branch-word is derived; and the figures of reference under the radical answer the meaning in the same manner.

Of PECULIARITIES.

95. There are several principles peculiar to the idiom or phraseology of the Manks language, when compared with the English; such as the unnessariness of the indefinite article a, in general.

96. One peculiarity is, that the Manks possesses a plural article, NY (the); as, NY DEINEY (the men); NY CLAGHVN (the stones): Y and YN are the singular definite articles. The collective nouns, such as, OLLAGH (cattle); SLKIH (people); LUGHT-TRIE (household or family); MAASE (kine), &c., are, as in the English, not reckoned plural nouns; therefore, have only the definite article YN preceding them.

97. A grand principle in Manks is the adjective being placed after the noun or substantive. In English, the adjective has precedence; therefore the quality of a thing is mentioned before the thing itself; but in Manks, (more agreeable to reason and common sense) the substantive precedes the adjective; as, CABBYL MIE (a good horse); BOOΛ CHOO (a black cow); MAGER MOOAR (a big field). There are a few exceptions.

98. In possessing a plural adjective, the Manks again has an advantage over the English, (there being no difference in the adjectives of singular and plural in that language); as, DEINEY MOOAREY (big or great men); CROINE ARDEY (high hills); THIEYN BEGGY (little houses), &c.

99. Another, is the derivative adjective, as I have called it, of or belonging to a thing. My reason for distinguishing this class of adjectives from others is, that there are some nouns that have two adjectives which differ materially in their meaning; for instance, the SUN; as, LAA BRIANAGH (a sunny, or sun shiny day), which I have left a common adjective; but GREINEY, I have marked an adjective derivative, of or belonging to the sun; as, CHIASS GREINEY (the heat of the sun, or the sun's heat); and OLION (a glen or valley); OLIONNAGH (having glens or valleys); OLIONNEY (of or belonging to the valley); as, FIRE NY OLIONNEY (the ravens of the valley); and CASSAGH (having feet, or footed); as, MAASE EIAR CASSAGH (four footed kine); COSBEY (of the foot or feet). The English of this class of adjectival words are aspen, hempen, oaken, baptismal, &c.

100. Another principle is, the language not making plural until three; the numbers of twenty, forty, sixty, eighty, a hundred, a thousand, &c. These are not twenty or forty men, but, literally twenty-man, &c. And I think the YN to SHIAGH-TINYN redundant, as in Daniel ix. 25 26.

101. Another and grand principle is, the emphatic: some instances of this are given in the work; but any substantive, &c. may be made emphatical by adding 's, which requires to be sounded es to the substantive, &c.; as, DTY CHREER'S (thy heart, emphatically); DTY OBBYR'S (thy work, emphatically), &c. In the English, the reader is left at sea without a compass, if he has not learned where to lay the emphasis, as few of the words differ in their form in that language for being emphatic; when unemphatical, thy is to be sounded the, and my, me, &c.

102. The substantives being all masculine or feminine, is another; there being no such anomaly in Manks as a neuter gender; we have however a few nouns, pronouns, and pronominals common to both genders. Some will have it that every word in the language is either masculine or feminine.

103. The verbs running into auxiliary terminations and pronominals; as, AGH, AIL, AL, EIL, EY, IN, INS, IT, YN, YNS, and YS, as are shown by the remarks of reference throughout the work, is another principle.

104. The adjectives and participles throughout the language requiring to be brought under the letter s, to show the degrees of comparison, as set forth in the 58th Remark, are exemplified in the work under that letter, is another.

105. The greatest difficulty to attain, by a person that did not learn it when young, is the changing of the initials of mutable consonants, and of vowel letters, or the pronunciation of secondary mutes or aspirations. There is very little occasion for such changing in the English; but to give an English scholar some idea of it, it may be necessary to show him something similar in his own language. The words from home require no change; but let him say at home, and he can hardly say home without a hiatus, or longer stop than ought to be; he will be very apt to say at lome: this is changing the h to l in speaking. Or let him say at all, and if he be not very careful he will say at tall, or a tall, this is changing the a to t. Or let him say the words, make haste, and he will be very apt to say make kaste: this is changing the h to k; and it is, he will be apt to say it tis; this is changing i to t.

106. And the article an, which is nothing more than the article a with an n to come between it and the word initialled by a vowel, if it were placed before the vowel in the word would amount to nearly the same thing; then an egg would be a negg; and an awl would be a nawl; an eye would be a neye, &c. &c.; these are somewhat like the changing of the initials in the Manks.

Of MUTABLE INITIALS.

107. The force of the pronunciation of secondary or auxiliary mutes (as they are called) is so different from that of the primary or radical, that they are expressed by different figures or letters in the Manks; from whence arises often the difficulty of finding the etymology of those words that branch or are derived from a radical. The Irish, to prevent this in their language, have a dot, point, or dash, &c. placed over or below the letter; that is, as if b or m required to be sounded v. The primary or radical are always retained, but known by the dash or dot, so that the etymology of words is easily found in that language.

108. Of the causes of the changing of the mutable initials, (d, f, and t, excepted.) Words of the feminine gender change their following words; as, CLAGH VANE (a white stone); which would, if CLAGH were masculine, be CLACH BANE; LAUE YESH (right hand); if LAUE were masculine, would be LAUE YESH; AWIN VEG: now if AWIN were of the masculine gender, it would be AWIN BEG; AWIN VOOR, of VOOR (a big or great river) if masculine it would be MOOR; so that the adjectives BANE, YESH, BEG, MOOR, are the primary or radical adjectives, which are changed by feminine substantives being placed before them to VANE, YESH, VEG, VOOR. From these examples the learner will see that it is of the utmost importance, in order to write and speak the language correctly, that he should know and be well acquainted not only with the names and words, but also with their genders.

109. Words initialled by vowels are subject to changes, as explained in Remarks 60 and 61. Mutable consonants being initials are also changeable, to show the preterit, without any word before them; as, BAIH (drown); but to show the pass time of action I must change BAIH to VAIH; VAIH EH EH YS CHEAYN (he drowned or did drown him in the sea); and GOW (take); OHOW EH OUILLEY NY V'AYM VOYM (he took all I had from me, or he did take all I had from me); and JEREK (hope, trust, or expect); I must change JEREK to YEREK; YEREK MEE RISE, AS VA MEE MOLLIT (I trusted or expected him, and he deceived me); and MOL (deceive); AGH VOL EH NEE (but he deceived me). BAIH, GOW, JERE, MOL, are thus changed me to their aspirations, VAIH, OHOW, YERE, VOL, &c.

110. Another cause of change is the vocative case, O YEE I JRE, (God) is here changed to YEE. TAR MARYM, VRAAR (come with me, brother); BRAAR is here changed to VRAAR. O BIE YACOR! (O house of Jacob); the t in THIE and the j in JACOR are here changed. JEAN, is changed to YEAN, and JUAN to YUAN, &c. &c.

111. Changes made by the articles Y and YN being placed before radical words, most of those initialled by vowels, borrow, as it were, the n from YN, in the pronunciation. The translators of the Scriptures have given another n to AH, or AA

(second); as, YN NAH (the second); and according to this rule, YN AALL (the flesh fork) should be YN NAALL; YN OLLAGH (the cattle), YN NOLLAGH; YN USHTRY (the water), YN NUSHTRY; &c.; but they have not been uniform in this rule, having given it to some words and withheld it from others. Y and YN when placed before b change it to v; c to ch; f to the second letter whether vowel or consonant; but the want of change in some of these is so faint that perhaps it would be better to retain the f in some than to omit it. G changes to gh; k to ch; m to v; which last, often in conversation, slides into w. P changes to ph; q to wh; s to t; sh to ch; sl to cl; y and YN do not change ch, d, j, and t.

112. The pronoun ε (his), changes the following mutable initials, viz.: b to v and w, when oo, u, or w, immediately follow; c to ch; ch to h; d to gh; and f similar to what is said on that letter in the preceding Remark. G to gh; j to y; k to ch; m to v; and which last, as shown in the preceding Remark, often slides into w, in conversation. P to ph; q to wh; s and sh to h; sl to l; t to h. All the mutables change by the above pronoun.

113. The pronoun ε (her), on the contrary, changes none of the mutables; but changes words initialled by vowels, by requiring h to be placed before them.

114. The words DY (to), DRY (thy), and MY, change the mutables exactly in the same manner as ε (his) does, as shown in Remark 112.

115. The changes caused by placing the adverb ao (too), before adjectives and participles are as follows: b to v or to w, when second letter; c to ch; ch to h; d to gh; g to gh, with a few exceptions to y; j to y; k to ch; m to v; p to ph; q to wh; s and sh to h; t to h.

116. The changes caused by the auxiliary verb ER (hath, has, have, or having, &c.) placed before verbs, require n to be placed before all the verbs beginning with vowels radically or derivatively. A, e, i, o, u, w, y, change to n; and the gh, when an aspiration of g, which, when initialled by n, has the sound of y, and which shows that it ought or ought not have that letter; but the translators of the Scriptures have written the word GOLL (going), when aspirated to gh; as, ER N'OHOLL, &c.; and the word GIALDYN (promise); as, ER N'GHIALDYN,—Heb. xi. 11; and ER N'YIALDYN,—Josh. ix. 21. The same may be said of GIAREY, &c. ER changes b to v; ch to j; d to gh; f to v, or the next letter in the syllable; g to gh; j to y; k to g; m to v; p to ph; q to wh; s and sh to h; sl to l; and t to d.

117. The changes of the mutable consonants, by placing the adverb FEER (very), before adjectives, are as follow: b to v; c to ch; g to gh; k to ch; m to v; p to ph; and qu to ew.

118. The changes the pronoun NYN causes, when placed before verbs and substantives, are as follow: Before words initialled by vowels, many require to borrow the last n in the pronunciation, in a similar case with YN. NYN changes b to m; c to g; ch to j; f to v; g to gh, or y, similar to the case of g by CHA, as shown in examples in this page; k to g; p to b; q to g, and t to d.

In concluding my Observations and Remarks, I cannot but admire the construction, texture, and beauty of the Manks Language, and how the words initially change their cases, moods, tenses degrees, &c. It appears like a piece of exquisite network, interwoven together in a masterly manner, and framed by the hand of a most skilful workman, equal to the composition of the most learned, and not the production of chance.—The depth of meaning that abounds in many of the words must be conspicuous to every person versed in the language.

Having but few verbs, its brevity may be complained of by some, but this deficiency is amply supplied in the same manner as when a like want occurs in the English. When a substantive or adjective has no verb belonging to itself, another verb is placed before the noun or adjective; as, DY VE (to be); DY CHOAILL (to take); DY GEDDYN (to get); DY CHUR (to give, put, send), &c.; DY YANNOO (to do, make, or perform). &c.

We have no verb for MAYNREY (happy)—neither has the English—nor its noun, MAYNRYS (happiness); but we say, DY VE MAYNREY (to be happy), &c. That our ancestors (the translators of the Scriptures) were tenacious that no infringement should be made in this particular is obvious, as the Scriptures, with a few exceptions to their orthography, &c., are an invaluable work. The verb to pray occurs above two hundred times in the English Scriptures; yet the translators have not once used that mongrel word, PRAYLL, or its parent, PRAYAL, (see Remark 79), which, and the like, are now generally used without reserve. I do not, however, allude to the Clergy, who, to their credit, always say GOAILL PADJER; EC PADJER; JANNOO PADJER, &c.; and when there is no necessity, we should not borrow from the English, but endeavour to keep the language as pure as possible.

D, for its sound see Remarks 7 and 8. All the words under this letter not marked 7, require the sound spoken of in Remark 8; and as a radical initial and its changes see 45. D is an initial in words radically from all the vowels, and also from F, as explained in Remarks 60, 119, 121, 143, &c.; in substantives from S, to show the plural possessive or ownership case; and in T for both nouns and verbs, a few of which may be seen by the letters at the end of the lines.

DA, p. p. 8. to him, for him, him, to, for; as, chur mee da eh (I gave it to him); te aym da (I have it for him); thig da (let him); eek da Cesar (pay to Cesar); —SYN, idem. It may not perhaps be amiss to state here that this word has something very singular belonging to it as respects the idiom of the English language, but which is, however, peculiar to the Manks. A person that would attempt to translate passages wherein this word occurs in the Manks Scriptures, according to the Hamiltonian or interinary system, would think it superfluous in many instances, especially where it is placed before plural and feminine nouns; as in 1 Tim. v. ix. Ny thig da ben-troeghe ve goit; which, to translate literally, would run thus, let not him a widow be taken; and in Gen. chap i. thig dany ushtaghyn (let him the waters); thig da ny eearlee (let him the fowls), &c. &c. A learner must not hesitate to sacrifice the idiom of his own language to learn that of another, but must form phrases altogether incorrect and foreign to his own language.

DAA, a. 8. two, the dual number; adv. twice, doubly. This is not the word used in counting, but that which is always used with its substantive in the singular number, as the Manks does not make plural till three. See 100.

H

As H is not a radical initial in the Manks language, it is not to be expected that all the branch words which might be brought under it will appear here; so many, however, are inserted as will show how the changes are effected. See Remark 14, and also 40, 44, 55, 56, 59, 139, and 163.

This letter is radical in all words under it when it is initial, except a few from F.

ICK, UICK, or AVICE, s. f. a creek or gullet. In looking over Dr. Borlase's vocabulary of the Cornish language, (which is now nearly extinct,) I found a word which exactly answers to our Ghaw, Giau, Guick, or Giuag, a creek or gullet. There are not less than nine places in the south of this Island, the names of which end in ick, viz.—Fleshick, Spoldrick, Parwick, Dressick, Saundrick, Grenick, Soáeric, Pollick, and Garwick.

ID, s. This, in the Manks, is only an ending syllable to adjectives, and makes them substantives; its meaning is, for the most part, the same as the English ness. See 89, &c.

IDD, s. pl. nests; Psl. civ. 17; hats, Dan. iii. 21.

IDD, a. d. of nest or nests, of hat or hats.

 MEER, s. f. a piece; pl. —YN. We have this word still retained in our language agreeable to that meaning, 1. Sam. xiii. 20; it is the proper Manks of piece; the word Peeish, which is too often made use of, is only a corruption of the English. Why some insist that it means bread may be easily accounted for; as, give the child a piece. Cur meer da'n bhannoo (give a piece of bread to the child). The above ellipsis may account for it. It is often the case that an article used in an action is called the action itself; for instance, tea for the meal, &c.; v. piece; —AGH, 77; —EE, 80; —IN, 83; —INS, 84; —YM, 86; —YMS, 87; —YS, 88.

N

This letter is one of the immutables, and does not change; words primarily initialled by vowels come under it, and some from F, G, S, &c. as shown. The reader is not to expect the whole of the branch words or derivatives, but as many of them will appear as may show how the changes are effected. The changelings from F to N all change to V in sacred or solemn discourse or writing.

NA, adv. than.

Cha NAAG, v. not leave or forsake; -AOH; -EE; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. F

Er NAAGAI'L, v. hath, &c. left, &c. F

Y NAAIE, s. the flat. F

Cha *N'AAIT'N or NAAIT'NEE, v. not gorse; -AOH; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. A

Er N'AAIT'NAGHEY, v. hath, &c. gorsed. A

NAAR or NAA'REE, v. shame, disgrace; -AOH, 77; -EE, 80; -IN, 83; -INS, 84; -YM, 86; -YMS, 87; -YS, 88.

NAAR'AGHEY, v. shameing.

NAAR'DEY, a. waste, decayed, abolished.

NAAR'REY, s. f. shame. See Nearey.

NAAR'REYDAGH, a. shameful, bashful.

NAAR'REYDER, s. m. one who shames; pl. -YN.

NAAR'RILDAGH, a. bashful.

NAAR'RIT, pt. shamed.

Cha NAARK or NAAR'KEE, v. not bathe; -AOH; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. F

Er NAAR'REY, v. hath, &c. bathed. F

Cha *N'AAARL or NAAR'LEE, v. not cook or dress meat; -AOH; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. A

Er NAAR'LAGHEY, v. hath, &c. cooked victuals. A

Er N'AG'GLAGHEY, v. hath, &c. frightened. A

NAGH, adv. not. There are two words in the Manks for not; thus for interrogating and commanding negatively; the other word (Cha) is for answering negatively or denying. Ny is often used instead of this word, but I think improperly; as, in Jer. xliii. 2, "Ny gow sheese gys Egypt," and in 2 Kings, ii. 18, "Ny gow Jee," which ought to have been Nagh.

NAGH LHIG Y JEE, in. let not God or God forbid!

NAGH YOD VE, adv. cannot be, impossible.

NAGHT, s. m. the way; with myr like as, that as; a contraction of Yn and Aght.

Yn NAR, s. f. (from Aa), second, the ordinal of two. As this word is initialled by n besides the n in Yn, other words initialled by vowels might claim the same; as, Yn Nollagh (the cattle); Yn Naassagh (the wilderness); yet, this is not the case. A NAIGHT, s. m. news, narrative, narration, tale.

Bee NAIGHT, s. m. a novelty in meat, some new or delicate meat to eat, a dainty.

NAIGH'EAGH, a. giving to tell news or tales.

Cha NAIK or NAK, v. not see; -AOH; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. F

Er NAIK'IN, v. hath, &c. seen. This verb and Naik and its declinables are not in Scripture; it is Vaik which is used on solemn or sacred occasions, but Naik in common conversation. F

Cha *NAILL or NAIL'LEE, v. not fail; -AOH; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. F

Er NAILLEIL', v. hath, &c. failed.

Cha NAILL or NAILLEE, v. not wish, not hire; -AOH; -IN; -INS; -YM; -YMS, 94. S.F

Er NAIL'LEV, v. hath, &c. hired. F

Cha NAILU'LHIEN, p. we would not wish, &c. S

Cha NAIL'LISH, p. he wishes not, or his wish is not for; -IN, id. em.

Cha NAIL'LIU. See Nilliu. S

NAILT, p. wouldst thou wish or be pleased to be so? -S, id. em. S

NAIM, s. m. uncle, the father or mother's brother; 2 Kings, xxiv. 17; Lev. xxv. 49; pl. -YN.

PURT, s. port, harbour, haven. The best pl.
 of this word is puirt, but in scripture it is purtygn.
PUR'TEY, a. d. of a port or harbour.
PURT-NOD-MOIR'REY, s. Port St. Mary. This safe and excellent harbour, which has been greatly improved of late years by the building of a new quay, no doubt took its name from a Catholic Chapel which formerly stood adjacent thereto, called St. Mary's, now razed from the foundation.
PURT-NY-HIN'SHEY or INNVSEY, s. Peel, literally, the harbour of the Island—the town and harbour of Peel. Some say that this word is derived from ny hinshtey, (the low situation);
 others, from ny ynsee (the seat of the literate):
 but it is obviously from inch or innys (an Island), the genitive article ny changes inch to hinch and ey; in that case, the harbour of the Peel Island.
PURT-SHEEA'RAN or SHEERAYN, s. Port Erin,
 the most western port or harbour of the Island,
 now generally called Port Iro.
PUSS, s. f. cheek. See also Puiss; pl. —YN.

PUS'SAL or PUS'SEY, v. getting swelled in the cheeks with cholera.
PY, s. f. a pie; pl. —AGHYN.
PY'AGH or P'AGH, s. m. a person. No doubt this is a contraction or a corruption of peccagh
 (a sinner), which see; it is used in common talk, and with some propriety when in opposition to baagh, as Py'agh ny baagh.
PYHT, in. pshaw, of contempt.
PYLE, s. f. a sharp pointed iron or ferrule on an arrow, an emerald; pl. —YN.

QUAAL'TAGH or QUAL'TAGH, s. m. one who meets;
pl. 71. Pro. xvii. 12. Hos. xiii. 8. The first person met on New Year's Day, or on going on some new work, &c. A company of young lads or men, generally went in old times on what they termed the Quallugh, at Christmas or New Year's Day to the house of their more wealthy neighbours; some one of the company repeating in an audible voice the following rhyme:—
 " *Ollíck ghennal erriu as ble'n feer vie,
 Seihl as slaynt d'n slane lught thie;
 Bea as gennallys cu bio ry-cheilley,
 Shee as graih eddyr mraane as deiney;
 Cooid as cowryn, stock as stoyr.
 Palchey phuddae, as skaddan dy-llooar;
 Arran as cashshey, eym as roayrt;
 Baase, myr lugh, ayus uhllin ny soalt;
 Cadley snachey tra vees shiu ny thie,
 As feueckle y jargan, nagh bee dy mie."*
 When this was repeated, they were then invited in to partake of the best that the house could afford.

 judgment is administered, perhaps called so because people have to confront the judge or one-another; pl. —YN.
QUAIVL-ARDREIL'TAZH, s. m. the chancery court.
 This has no doubt been corrupted to what you hear Quaivl-andrailagh; some say the latter is from Quaivl-wandrailagh (the wandering court), but I prefer the first.
QUAIVL-THEA'Y, s. f. the common law.

This letter and its changes see remarks 30 and 59; it takes in derivatives from S. Most words in T would sound better, according to the Manks pronunciation with h after them, as shown in Remark 30.

TA, v. (present tense) am, are, art, is; is an answer in the affirmative corresponding with yes, or ay, in English, though not the same part of speech. Ta mee (I am); ta shin (we are); ta oo, or as contracted, T'ou (thou art); ta eh, or as contracted, T'eh (he is); and as contracted for the neuter gender, te (it is). There are other words that answer affirmatively when the question is put to suit them, as, she (yes); nee (will); fod (can); &c. &c. the answers negatively would be cha nee, cha jean, chu vod, &c. There is great nicety in these replies; but however illiterate the Manksman may be, he never fails using the proper word. Ta is only used in assertions and affirmations: see vel, which has the same meaning in interrogations.

- Yn TAAGH, s. the vessel. S
